

I am listener of XM radio, and must say that I find it ridiculous that the FCC would think about pulling the weather and traffic reports for the system. The main reason that I listen to XM is because of the quality of the radio. There is no static, no interference when listening. FM in the Atlanta has a lot of interference and station bleed over for the area. So all I ever listen to now is XM, because of that. I think that additions of the weather and traffic reports to the system are much over due. If the FM stations out there are afraid, they need to step up to the plate and delivery the same quality of service and signal for the area. So please do not take this ability away from XM.

Just my 2 cents

Robert A. Vautier II